

As a resident of the West Island for 23 years, I highly value our access to green spaces, abundant urban wildlife, and high quality of life in this sector.

Climate change is the biggest challenge facing our generation and preserving green spaces is imperative. The L'Anse-à-L'Orme Nature Park is an important wetland area for local wildlife and is home to several species that were previously thought to have vanished from the island of Montreal.

The L'Anse-à-L'Orme Nature Park is also an important recreational area for walkers, trail runners and cyclists.

Considering the importance of this urban park for local wildlife and residents, I am in favor of protecting it from further development.

Katheryn Kastner