To whom it may concern

The proposed development defies everything about sustainability that I thought we learnt in the last 50 years or so. I would probably not be opposed if it was a high density set up with infrastructures in place that would people allow to live, shop and work without using the car. As it is, it is just another ugly piece of urban sprawl, destroying one of the last remaining resting places for migratory birds on the island. Please re-consider: it is not too late.
